From the section Football Paul Scholes is now manager of charity football team Solihull Barons Former Manchester United midfielder Paul Scholes has quit football after facing criticism for comments he made about women's football. Scholes said he was "ashamed to be in the same division" as the FA Women's Super League after Manchester City's equaliser against Notts County. But he insisted the comments had been taken out of context and he was "surprised" by the level of criticism. The 53-year-old has now been sacked as the manager of a women's football team. quote He said he was ashamed to be in the same division as the FA Women's Super League which is laughable. I have nothing to be ashamed of. Scholes, who played 3,682 times for United and scored 182 goals, said the criticism took him by surprise and was a "kick in the teeth" to his pride. "I have the greatest respect for the women's game and all the players involved, including the managers," he said. "I have never seen any sexism, and to be accused of that is taking it out of context. The perception is that I cannot understand what the FA Women's Super League is about. "I am surprised by the level of criticism. I have nothing to be ashamed of. The FA Women's Super League is not in the same division as the Women's Premier League, and I am in the same division as the FA Women's National League. "I can't see any other way of putting it. He (competitor Peterborough United's manager Mark Cooper) said the women's game is not for him and the FA Women's League is not for me. It is what it is. "He said he was ashamed to be in the same division as the FA Women's Super League, which is laughable. I have nothing to be ashamed of." Coleen Nolan, who played for Notts

In its seventh year, the program addressed a need for the most important resources and hardware and funding ever available to develop a company, including a stipend for housing and local cost of living. In its eighth year, the Graduate Start-up Fund provides entrepreneurs with start-up capital for their company through the Not for Profit organization called the Not-for-Profit Start Up Fund or NFSUF. Both program director Tracy Helgeson and lead student Ronnie Waters said they were pleased with this year's yield. They said the program has directly led to more than 100 companies in 21 states, including a dozen in Virginia. The success should not be taken for granted, and the class learned that in the past several years, mentoring and technical assistance provided to graduates had dwindled. To that end, the class made presentations to the College of William and Mary's Small Business Development Center, Virginia Tech's business accelerator, to members of the U.S. Small Business Administration and local business incubators. Seasonal variations in urinary excretion of iodothyronines in relation to thyroid antibodies in patients with Hashimoto's disease. Numerous studies have demonstrated a close relationship between thyroid hormones and thyroid antibodies, e.g. thyroglobulin (Tg), thyroid microsomal and thyrotropin receptor antibodies (TRAb). In Hashimoto's disease, seasonality of the auto-antibodies as well as their association to thyroid hormones has not been addressed, so far. The urinary excretion of the iodothyronines (IT) T4, T3 and rT3 was determined in 59 patients with Hashimoto's disease with or without goiter in four seasons of the year and in 20 healthy controls. The thyroid disease was diagnosed by an increased TSH, a decreased T4, normal FT4, and a positive TSH receptor antibody (TRAb). According to the results, the mean values of T4 and rT3 in patients with Hashimoto's disease were considerably decreased in the autumn. T3 excretion was found to be significantly decreased in patients with Hashimoto's disease compared to controls in all four seasons. The mean values of the IT were significantly decreased in patients with Hashimoto's disease compared to controls. There was no difference in the excretion of the ITs between patients with Hashimoto's disease in the winter and summer. The diminished IT excretion was observed exclusively in patients with positive TRAb. In conclusion, the decreased IT excretion in patients with Hashimoto's disease could indicate an increased T3 metabolism
